

The Best of Vancouver & Victoria

If you really want to understand Vancouver, stand at the edge of the Inner Harbour (the Canada Place cruise-ship terminal makes a good vantage point) and look around you. To the west you'll see Stanley Park, one of the world's largest urban parks, jutting out into the waters of Burrard Inlet. To the north, just across the inlet, rise snow-capped mountains. To the east, right along the water, is the low-rise brick-faced Old Town. And almost everything else you see lining the water's edge will be a new glass-and-steel high-rise tower. As giant cruise ships glide in to berth, floatplanes buzz in and out, and your ears catch a medley of foreign tongues, you may wonder just where on earth you are. Vancouver is majestic and intimate, sophisticated and completely laid back, a bustling, prosperous, world-class city that somehow, almost miraculously, manages to combine its contemporary, urban-centered consciousness with the free-spirited magnificence of nature on a grand scale.

Vancouver is probably one of the "newest" cities you'll ever visit, and certainly it's one of the most cosmopolitan. There's a youthfulness, too, a certain Pacific Northwest chic (and cheek) that comes from being used in so many movies that Vancouver is sometimes called "Hollywood North." I can guarantee you that part of your trip will be spent puzzling out what makes it so unique, so livable and lovable, what gives it such a buzz. Nature figures big in that equation, but so does enlightened city planning and the diversity of cultures. Vancouver is a place where people want to live. It's a place that awakens dreams and desires.

The city's history is in its topography. Thousands of years ago, a giant glacier sliced along the foot of the coast range, carving out a deep trench and piling up a gigantic moraine of rock and sand. When the ice retreated, water from the Pacific flowed in and the moraine became a peninsula, flanked on one side by a deep natural harbor (today's Inner Harbour) and on the other by a river of glacial meltwater (today called the Fraser River). Vast forests of fir and cedar covered the land and wildlife flourished. The First Nations tribes that settled in the area developed rich cultures based on cedar and salmon.

Some 10,000 years later, a surveyor for the Canadian Pacific Railroad came by, took in the peninsula, the harbor, and the river, and decided he'd found the perfect spot for the CPR's new Pacific terminus. He kept it quiet, as smart railway men tended to do, until the company had bought up most of the land around town. Then the railway moved in, set up shop, and the city of Vancouver was born.

Working indoors, Vancouverites have seemingly all fallen in love with the outdoors. And why shouldn't they? Every terrain needed for every kind of outdoor pursuit—hiking, in-line skating, mountain biking, downhill and cross-country skiing, kayaking, windsurfing, rock climbing, parasailing, snowboarding—is right there in their backyard: ocean, rivers, mountains, islands, sidewalks. The international resort town of Whistler, which will take center stage during the Winter Olympics in 2010, is just two hours north of downtown Vancouver.

And when they're not skiing or kayaking, they're drinking coffee or eating out. In the past decade or so, Vancouver has become one of the top restaurant cities in the world, bursting with an incredible variety of cuisines and making an international name for itself with its unique Pacific Northwest cooking. The new food mantra here is "buy locally, eat seasonally."

The rest of the world has taken notice of the blessed life people in these parts lead. The World Council of Cities ranked Vancouver second only to Geneva for quality of life (and who wants to live in Geneva?). Surveys generally list it as one of the 10 best cities in the world to live in. It's also one of the 10 best to visit, according to Condé Nast Traveler. And in 2003, the International Olympic Committee awarded Vancouver the right to host the 2010 Olympic Winter Games. Heady stuff, particularly for a spot that less than 20 years ago was routinely derided as the world's biggest mill town.

Though some "heritage buildings" still remain in Vancouver, the face of the city you see today is undeniably new. Starting in the 1960s, misguided planners and developers seemed intent on demolishing every last vestige of the city's pioneer past, replacing old brick and wood buildings with an array of undistinguished concrete high-rises and blocky eyesores. Citizen outcry finally got the bulldozers to stop their rampage. Luckily, landscaping and gardening was an ingrained part of life in this mild climate, so plants and trees and shrubs were not uprooted for endless parking lots. You may be amazed, in fact, by the amount of green and the number of fountains and the overall lushness of neighborhoods like the West End, which also happens to be one of the most densely populated areas in the world. A building boom preceded Expo '86 and followed it as well, spurred on by enormous amounts of cash pouring in from Hong Kong and Asia. The new towers, made of glass and steel, are much lighter looking and seem more in keeping with the hip, international image that Vancouver is developing for itself.

If you miss the old in Vancouver, you'll find plenty of it in Victoria, some 80km (50 miles) across the Strait of Georgia on Vancouver Island. Victoria took the opposite approach from Vancouver and preserved nearly all its heritage buildings. As a consequence, Victoria, beautifully sited on its own Inner Harbour, is one of the most charming small cities you'll ever find (it has about 325,000 residents in the Greater Victoria area, compared to around 2 million in Vancouver). Since it's on an island, accessible only by ferry (the best way to go) or floatplane, a more leisurely sense of time prevails in Victoria. It's a perfect antidote for stressed-out mainlanders.

For years Victoria marketed itself quite successfully as a little bit of England on the North American continent. So successful was the colonial sales pitch, residents began to believe it themselves. They began growing elaborate rose gardens, which flourished in the mild Pacific climate, and they cultivated a taste for afternoon tea with jam and scones. They were islanders ruled by the mother island from which all culture emanated and was exported.

For decades, this continued, until eventually it was discovered that not many residents of Victoria shared a taste for bad English cooking, so restaurants branched out into seafood, ethnic, and fusion. And lately, as visitors have shown more interest in exploring the natural world, Victoria has added whale-watching and mountain-biking trips to its traditional London-style double-decker bus tours. The result is that Victoria is the only city in the world where you can zoom out on a boat in the morning to see a pod of killer whales, and make it back in time for an expansive afternoon tea. Once the people of Victoria saw the glories all around them instead of those reflected from a dying Empire, the place became a lot more interesting. It's a lot quieter and ten times more laid-back than Vancouver, but that's part of its peculiar charm. And if you add the Butchart Gardens, a truly world-class garden that celebrated its centenary in 2004, and the fabulous First Nations art collection in the Royal B.C. Museum, you've got all you need for a memorable holiday just 90 minutes from the big city.

1 The Most Unforgettable Travel Experiences: Vancouver

- Taking a Carriage Ride through Stanley Park: One of the largest urban parks in the world, and certainly one of the most beautiful, Stanley Park is nothing short of magnificent. You can sample the highlights on a delightful 1-hour carriage ride that winds through the forest, along Burrard Inlet, past cricket fields, rose gardens, and the park's superlative collection of First Nations totem poles. See p. 116.
- Wandering the West End: Encompassing the über-shopping strip known as Robson Street, as well as cafe-lined Denman and a forest of high-rise apartments, the West End is the urban heart of Vancouver. Enjoy the lush trees lining the streets, the range of architecture, the diversity of cultures, the latest fashions and fashionistas, and the neat little surprises on every side street. See Walking Tour 1, p. 145.
- Dining Out on Local Seafood: Visitors are rightly amazed at the abundance of fresh-that-day seafood available in Vancouver's restaurants. This is a city where an appetizer of raw oysters often precedes a main course of wild salmon or halibut. See chapter 6.
- Dining Out, Period: The number of truly outstanding restaurants in Vancouver is astonishing, and the prices are ridiculously low when compared to other food capitals. A meal at one of Vancouver's top restaurants will wake you up to the glories of the food scene here, and you'll find extraordinary tastes for every budget in chapter 6.
- Visiting the Vancouver Aquarium: It's a Jacques Cousteau special, live and right there in front of you. Fittingly enough, the aquarium has an excellent display on the Pacific Northwest, plus sea otters (cuter than they have any right to be), beluga whales, sea lions, and a Pacific white-sided dolphin. See p. 118.
- Exploring Chinatown: Fishmongers call out their wares before a shop filled with crabs, eels, geoducks, and bullfrogs, while farther down the street elderly Chinese women haggle over produce as their husbands hunt for deer antler or dried sea horse at a traditional Chinese herbalist. When you're tired of looking and listening, head inside to any one of a dozen restaurants to sample succulent Cantonese cooking. See chapter 6 and Walking Tour 2, p. 150.
- Marveling at First Nations Artwork in the Museum of Anthropology: The building—by native son Arthur Erickson—would be worth a visit in itself, but this is also one of the best places in the world to see and learn about West Coast First Nations art and culture. See p. 123.
- Browsing the Public Market on Granville Island: Down on False

Southern British Columbia

A Short History of First Nations

When Captain Vancouver arrived in English Bay in 1792, there were more than 50 First Nations living in what is now British Columbia, speaking about 30 languages from six distinct language families.

Exactly where each tribe lived, when they arrived, and how many members each had is all now a matter of some controversy, but evidence suggests that the area had been settled for some 9,000 to 10,000 years. One hundred percent of the province's land area is now claimed by one or more First Nations. Negotiations are proceeding slowly: One of the most important aspects of any claim is a band's oral tradition. The stories and legends about where a band came from, what lands it occupied, and how and where it gathered food are thus not just stories and legends; in certain circumstances they are considered the equivalent of legal documents, with their content and ownership a huge issue.

Living in the rainforest, all of these coastal peoples developed an extremely rich and complex culture, using cedar as their primary building material and, for food, harvesting marine resources such as herring, shellfish, and especially salmon. The richness of the local environment allowed these peoples ample surplus; their spare time was devoted to the creation of stories and art. Now undergoing a revival, coastal art, whether in wood or glass or precious metals, usually depicts stylized figures from native mythology, including such universal figures as the Raven, or tribal totems, such as the Bear, Frog, or Killer Whale.

The central ceremony of the coastal First Nations was and is the potlatch, a gathering of tribes held to mark a significant event such as the raising of Creek, this former industrial site was long ago converted into a truly eye-popping and sense-staggering indoor public market. Hop on the miniferry at the foot of Davie Street in Yaletown and in 10 minutes you'll be there. At the market you'll find incredible food and goodies; put together a picnic and sit outside by the wharf to people- or boat-watch as you nosh. See p. 167.

- Kayaking on Indian Arm: Vancouver is one of the few cities on the edge of a great wilderness, and one of the best ways to appreciate its splendor is by kayaking on the gorgeous Indian Arm. Rent a kayak or go with a company—they may even serve you a gourmet meal of barbecued salmon.

See “Outdoor Activities” in chapter 7, p. 134.

- Discovering the Paintings of Emily Carr at the Vancouver Art Gallery: It's always a thrill to discover a great artist, and Emily Carr's work hauntingly captures the primal appeal of B.C.'s rugged, rain- and wave-washed forests and shores. See p. 134.
- Crossing the Capilano Suspension Bridge: Stretched across a deep forested canyon, high above old trees and a rushing river, this famous pedestrian-only suspension bridge has been daring visitors to look down for over a hundred years. Now you can explore the giant forest trees, too, on a series of artfully constructed treewalks. See p. 125.

a totem pole or the coming of age of a son or daughter. Invited tribes sing and dance traditional songs (which are considered to be their private property), while the host, both to thank his guests and to demonstrate his wealth, gives away presents. At the end of the 19th century, when First Nations culture—supported by a flood of wealth from the sea otter trade—reached unprecedented heights, potlatches could last for days, and chiefs would give away all they had.

The sea otter debacle aside (encouraged by American and British fur traders, coastal natives hunted sea otters to extinction along most of the coast), coastal indigenous peoples were exemplary environmental managers. Pre-contact, First Nations society was divided into a nobility of chiefly families, commoners, and slaves, the latter mostly war captives taken during raids.

In the years post-contact, the coastal First Nations were decimated by diseases such as smallpox (it's estimated that some 10,000 people lived along the coastal waterways and all but 600 of them were killed by smallpox carried by white settlers), by the loss of traditional fishing rights, by the repression of traditional rituals such as the potlatch, and by the forced assimilation into English-Canadian culture. In the decades after World War II, an entire generation of native children was forced into residential schools where speaking native languages and learning native stories were forbidden. The 1980s and 1990s were periods of long and slow recovery. Though still beset by problems, the First Nations communities are on their way back to becoming a powerful and important force on the B.C. coast.

- Watching the Sunset from a Waterside Patio: Why else live in a city with such stunning views? Many places on False Creek, English Bay, and Coal Harbour have great waterside patios.

For something different, head to the North Shore, where you don't get to see mountains, but you get stunning city views. See chapter 7.

2 The Most Unforgettable Travel Experiences: Victoria

- Strolling Victoria's Inner Harbour: Watch the boats and aquatic wildlife come and go while walking along a paved pathway that winds past manicured flower gardens. The best stretch runs south from the Inner Harbour near the Government Buildings, past Undersea World, the Royal London Wax Museum, and the Seattle ferry dock. See p. 241.
- Savoring Afternoon Tea: Yes, it's expensive and incredibly touristy, but it's also a complicated and ritual-laden art form that goes on for at least an hour. Besides, it's good. See p. 216.
- Catching the Fireworks at Butchart Gardens: This world-class garden 20 minutes north of downtown Victoria is an absolutely must-see attraction. Gorgeous during the day and subtly illuminated on summer evenings, it takes on a whole new personality when the famous fireworks begin. Saturday nights in the summertime at Butchart Gardens, you get both. See p. 224.

- Touring the Royal B.C. Museum: One of the best small museums in the world, the Royal B.C. does exactly what a good regional museum should do—explain the region and its people. The First Nations galleries are breathtaking reminders of the richness of native culture. See p. 226.
- Whale-Watching: Of all the species of orcas (killer whales), those on the Washington and B.C. coasts are the only ones that live in large and complicated extended families. This makes Victoria a particularly good spot to whale-watch because the orcas travel in large, easy-to-find pods. There's something magical about being out on the water and seeing a pod of 15 animals surface just a few hundred meters away. See "Whale-Watching in chapter 14, p. 240.

- Touring by Miniferry: Catch a Victoria Harbour Ferry and take a 45-minute tour around the harbor past the floating neighborhood of West Bay or up the gorge, where tidal waterfalls reverse direction with the changing tide. Moonlight tours depart every evening at sunset. See "Getting Around," in chapter 11, and "Organized Tours," in chapter 14.
- Biking the Dallas Road to Willows Bay: Where else can you find a bike path by an ocean with high mountain peaks for a backdrop? See p. 250.

3 The Most Unforgettable Travel Experiences beyond Vancouver & Victoria

- Skiing and Mountain Biking at Whistler and Blackcomb Resorts: Why ski anywhere else? The best resorts in North America merged for a total of more than 200 runs on two adjoining mountains, and full-day lift passes are as low as C$59 (US$47) for adults. In the summer, the same slopes become a world-class mountain bike network. See chapter 18.
- Ziptrekking at Whistler: Once you're strapped into your safety harness, you're hooked onto cables suspended hundreds of feet above a wild river, leap off, and away you go. Safe for everyone from eight to eighty, Ziptrek is an exhilarating adventure that you'll never forget. See p. 283.
- Looking for Bald Eagles in Squamish: The bald eagle is the national symbol of the United States, but in winter, when the salmon are running, you can see more of these huge birds in Squamish than just about anywhere else in the world. See "Wildlife-Watching," in chapter 7, p. 142.
- Discovering Pacific Rim National Park: The drive to this rugged maritime park on Vancouver Island's west coast is stunning, and once there, you're in a world of old-growth temperate rainforests and surf-pounded beaches. It's a place where you can experience the primal glories of nature amid the pampering luxuries of a first-class resort. See chapter 18.

4 The Best Splurge Hotels: Vancouver

For a complete description of these and other Vancouver accommodations, see chapter 5.

8 The Most Unforgettable Dining Experiences: Vancouver

- Bishop's (2183 W. Fourth Ave.; ☎ 604/738-2025): Owner John Bishop makes every customer feel special, and your palate will tingle when it encounters the sublime delights of his freshest of the fresh Pacific Northwest cuisine. See p. 101.
- C (1600 Howe St.; ☎ 604/681-1164): The creativity of the chef, the quality of the ingredients, and the freshness of the seafood all combine to make this contemporary restaurant overlooking False Creek the best place in Vancouver for innovative seafood. See p. 87.
- Cin Cin (1154 Robson St.; ☎ 604/688-7338): For maximum buzz, dine at this Robson Street star on a Friday or Saturday night. It's a lively people-watching spot where the Italian menu is divided into Old World and New, and tutti tastes terrific. See p. 97.
- Coast (1257 Hamilton St.; ☎ 604/685-5010): "Catch it, cook it, eat it" is the motto of this superlative Yale-town restaurant. Fresh fish from around the world are cooked to elegant perfection in a beautiful space created with light wood and a dramatic center-island chef's kitchen. See p. 91.
- Joe Fortes Seafood and Chop House (777 Thurlow St.; ☎ 604/669-1940): In the heart of the Robson shopping area, Joe Fortes has the best oyster bar in town and prepares its that-day-fresh fish the old-fashioned way, without a lot of culinary intervention. See p. 93.

- Lumière (2551 W. Broadway; ☎ 604/739-8185): Lumière has often won the top spot in the yearly Vancouver Restaurant Awards. It's expensive but worth it to be pampered by chef Rob Feenie, the darling of the Vancouver food world and an increasingly hot commodity in New York. See p. 101.
- Raincity Grill (1193 Denman St.; ☎ 604/685-7337): With its low ceiling, crisp linens, windows overlooking English Bay, and fabulous food, Raincity is a place that makes you want to linger—and try everything on the seasonally adjusted menu. See p. 98.
- Tojo's Restaurant (202–777 W. Broadway; ☎ 604/872-8050): The most sublime sushi in B.C., maybe in all of Canada. Just remember to take out an extra mortgage and practice your so-you're-a-movie-star-I-don't-care look. See p. 102.
- West (2881 Granville St.; ☎ 604/738-8938): For amazingly fine dining that utilizes the freshest local seasonal ingredients, you can't go wrong with this stellar restaurant in Kitsilano. It's a culinary highpoint of the entire region. See p. 103.

9 The Most Unforgettable Dining Experiences: Victoria

- The Aerie (600 Ebedora Lane, Malahat; ☎ 800/518-1933 or 250/743-7115): Even if you're not staying at The Aerie, you might want to consider eating there because chef Christophe Letard's cooking is as unmistakably French as his accent, and tres fantastique. See p. 220.

- Arbutus Grille and Winebar (Brentwood Bay Lodge, 849 Verdier Ave.; ☎ 250/544-5100): The beautiful dining room of Brentwood Bay Lodge, about 20 minutes north of Victoria, serves a regionally-inspired menu that changes daily according to what is fresh and in season. The wine list is exemplary, and so is the service. See p. 221.
- Camille's (45 Bastion Sq.; ☎ 250/381-3433): Enjoy a glass of fine wine as you savor the fresh, comforting Pacific Northwest cuisine at this quiet, cozy, candlelit restaurant in downtown Victoria. See p. 215.
- Canoe (450 Swift St.; ☎ 250/361-1940): Casual but upscale, Canoe has great beer, good fresh Pacific Northwest food, and the option of dining indoors or out on one of the nicest patios in Victoria. See p. 214.
- The Fairmont Empress (721 Government St.; ☎ 250/384-8111): If you're doing the high tea thing only once, you may as well do it right, and there's no better place than Victoria's crown jewel of a hotel, where the tea is huge and the service impeccable. See p. 216.

- Il Terrazzo Ristorante (555 Johnson St., off Waddington Alley; ☎ 250/361-0028): All you have to do is ask around for Victoria's best Italian restaurant, and people will point you to Il Terrazzo, which features excellent northern-Italian cooking and extra points for the lovely patio. See p. 215.
- Sooke Harbour House (1528 Whiffen Spit Rd., Sooke; ☎ 800/889-9688 or 250/642-3421): Quality, freshness, inventiveness, and incredible attention to detail make this fabled inn the most memorable dining experience in (well, near) Victoria. It serves the best gifts from the sea and its own garden, and eating here is always a culinary adventure, well worth the money and the trip. See p. 221.

10 The Best Things to Do for Free (or Almost): Vancouver

You'll find more suggestions for free things to do in "Unforgettable Travel Experiences," earlier.

- Walk the Stanley Park Seawall: Or jog, blade, bike, skate, ride—whatever your favorite mode of transport is, use it, but by all means get out to enjoy this superlative and super-exhilarating path at the water's edge. See p. 118.
- Watch the Fireworks Explode over English Bay: Every August during the July/August HSBC Celebration of Light, three international fireworks companies compete by launching their best displays over English Bay. As many as 500,000 spectators cram the beaches around English Bay, while those with boats sail out to watch from the water. See p. 24.

- Stroll the Beach: It doesn't matter which beach, there's one for every taste. Wreck Beach below UBC is for nudists, Spanish Banks is for dog walkers, Jericho Beach is for volleyballers, Kitsilano Beach is for serious suntanning, and English Bay Beach is for serious people-watching. See p. 134.
- Picnic at the Lighthouse: Everyone has their favorite picnic spot—one of the beaches or up on the mountains. One of the prettiest picnic spots is Lighthouse Park on the North Shore. Not only do you get to look back over at Vancouver, but also the walk down to the rocky waterline runs through a pristine, old-growth rainforest. See p. 129.

The Best Websites for Vancouver & Victoria

- Entertainment Info (www.ticketstonight.ca): This site is a great place to turn to for half-price night-of tickets and general entertainment information in the Vancouver area.
- Tourism B.C. (www.hellobc.com): The official site of the provincial government tourism agency, this site provides good information on attractions, as well as higher-end accommodations.
- Tourism Vancouver (www.tourismvancouver.com): The official city tourism agency site provides a great overview of attractions, including an excellent calendar of events, plus a few last-minute deals on accommodations.
- Tourism Victoria (www.tourismvictoria.com): Victoria's official tourism site functions much the same as Vancouver's, with up-to-date, comprehensive information about what to do and see around the city.
- Whistler & Blackcomb Resorts (www.whistler-blackcomb.com): This site offers a particularly helpful overview of activities and accommodations options available at North America's premier ski resort.

- Hike the North Shore: The forests of the North Shore are at the edge of a great wilderness and only 20 minutes from the city. Step into a world of muted light and soaring cathedral-like spaces beneath the tree canopy. See "Hiking" in chapter 7, p. 138.

11 The Best Things to Do for Free (or Almost): Victoria

You'll find more suggestions for free things to do in "Unforgettable Travel Experiences," earlier in this chapter.

- Climb Mount Douglas: Actually, you don't even have to climb. Just drive up and walk around. The whole of the Saanich Peninsula lies at your feet. See p. 227.
- Beachcomb: Just find a beach, preferably a rocky one, and turn stuff over or poke through the tide pools.

The best beaches are along Highway 14, starting with East Sooke Regional Park, and moving out to French Beach, China Beach, Mystic Beach, and, the very best of all, Botanical Beach Provincial Park, some 60km (37 miles) away by Port Renfrew. Remember to put the rocks back once you've had a peek. See "Beaches," "Especially for Kids," and "Watersports" in chapter 14.
